Pigott's Declaration Accuses Labouchere of Offering That Sum Through a Solicitor if Pigott Would Swear that the Parnell Letters Were Forged... Parnellites Say Pigott Did Confess that They Were Forgeries.

Solicitor Soames, of the London Times, testifying before the Parnell Commission yesterday. said that Richard Pigott, who brought the alleged Parnell letters to the Times, had accused Mr. Labouchere of offering him, through Solicitor Lewis, £1,000, if he would swear that They Invade Syracuse for a Banquet and the letters were forgeries. It is claimed on the other side that Pigott did declare to Labouchere and Lewis that the letters were not genuine.

[SPECIAL CABLE DESPATCH TO THE WORLD.] LONDON, Feb. 15. -- Parnell's friends were seen laughing obstreperously and holding their sides as they left the Commission Court to-day. The cause of this outburst of merriment was the evidence of Soames, the attorney, and Macdonald, the manager, of the Times. Such an exposure of imbecility and recklessness on the part of men in control of a great newspaper was never before seen. Macdonald had to confess that when he published the forged letters he had taken no means whatever to examine their authenticity beyond their reference to one handwriting expert, had never asked for the envelopes, had not even asked the name of the recipient of the letters, did not know and did not ask for months afterwards from whom the had been obtained by the Times agent, and did not know until this day whom they were supposed to be directed to.

The people in court almost stood aghast this open confession of the incredrecklessness with which the charge incitement to assassination was mad which the reputation and for tune of the greatest paper in England were imperilled. Part of the examination revealed a nice little counterplot going on for weeks. Parnell knew months ago that Pigott had forged the letters. Labouchere, who is a warm friend of the Irish party and who has a great love for amateur work, got into communication with Pigott and from his own lips received a confession of forgery. These forgeries were not made by tracing over, but by imitating the handwriting. An exposure of the signature to the microscope reveals that the writing is broken in several points, showing the trepidstion and slowness of the forger. Pigott carefully considered for a long time whether he had better make a clean breast of it, in hopes of a reward, to Labouchere, or to stick to the Times, Apparently, his latest idea is to stand by the Ymes and swear to the genuineness of the letters. On cross-examination he is sure to break wn, as he will have to invent a person to whom the letters were addressed. Besides, both Labouchere and George Lewis will swear to his open confession to them of forgery. Interest in the case has been greatly quickened, but still the public is so wearied that even the Parnell letters cease to produce the intense interest they once did. Parnell was in court to-day, though not looking very well. His health is better than it was. The startling confession of Macdonald, heightened by his stupid manner, has made m, the public thinks, the best witness Parnell had or can have. T. P. O'CONNOR.

TWAS SIGNED "JESSE JAMES, GOV."

A Bit of Historic Forgery Discovered by s St. Louis Official.

Louis, Feb. 15 .- A remarkable piece o bold forgery was discovered here yesterday in a piece of State security paper twenty-five years old. A lot of bonds were presented to City Comptroller Campbell in the course of a financial transaction by J. S. Arthur. All the collaterals passed inspection except one Missouri debond of the isers of 1864 for the sum of fonse bond of the isure of 1864 for the sum of $\circ{2}{0}. This was handed back to the owner, the Comptroller telling him that it recalled a bit of historic forgery. The words "Jesse James, Gov. of Missouri," had been written in the blank space left for the signature of the Governor. Otherwise every signature and every other feature of the document was genuine.

Arthur was astonished at the discovery of the forgery. He explained that he had bought the bonds years ago, but had not examined them very critically on receiving them, as he did not doubt that all were good. He loses nearly $1,000, including the face of the bond and the interest that should have accrued.

Glorious Time Generally.

[SPECIAL TO THE WORLD.] Syracuse, Feb. 15 .- One hundred and fifty Cornell Sophomores arrived here to-night, osensibly to hold their banquet at the Globe Hotel, but their real purpose was to paint the quiet City of Salt a brilliant red, and royally they succeeded. Headed by a band, they marched directly to the house of Mayor Kirk and gave forth such slogans as only Cornell boys can. Mayor Kirk said: "Cor-

Cornell boys can. Mayor Kirk said: "Cornell Sophomores, I have heard of you before, I welcome you to Syraense. The city is yours. Enjoy yourselves, but before you leave I want to shake hands with every one of you."

The Sophs marched into the pleasant house and were introduced to the Mayor. Every prominent street in the city was accorded the pleasure of seeing 150 gay fellows marching, and at every house where ladies were to be seen the '91 class yell—'Who-Rah-Rye; X-C-I;"—was lustily given. The officers of the banquet were: Orator, A. G. Van Everen; Poet, Theron D. Davis; Historian, J. M. Gorham; Prophet, F. Raymond, The poet at the close of a long enumeration of '91's great virtues, paid this tribute to the class:

Your greatest achievement, a strange narration—

Your greatest achievement—a strange narration— Not one of you fainted in bloody vaccination. To the toast on vaccination C. C. Dickinson responded. He referred to the fainting of so many brave men, the fall of the journalistic class, the lameness of the co-eds and The World's graphic account of the whole affair.

Atrecious Murder of Three Women and Child in North Carolina.

INPECIAL TO THE WORLD. I CHARLOTTE, N. C., Feb. 15.—One of the most corrible crimes that ever blotted the calendar of North Carolina is to-night reported from Bertie County. In a small cottage, near Mount Olive. esided Jacob Faucett with his wife. They had only one child, about one year old. Faucett was a farmer who, as a rule, attended to his own ousiness, but he had neighbors who were very troublesome at all times. Last Wednesday he became involved in a quarrel with them about some matters of little importance, and Mrs. Faucett, who possessed perhaps too much temper, joined in the dispute, which grew very heated and exciting.

Some of Faucett's neighbors had several times heated and exciting.

Some of Faucett's neighbors had several times threatened his life, and he had been compelled on many occasions to arm himself in self-defense. On Faucett's premises lived three negro women, in a cabin, who did work for him about the house, and who, of course, always befriended their employer. Last Wednesday night Faucett was compelled to be away and he left his wife and child alone in the house, with no one near only the negro women in the cabin. Some time after midnight several men entered Faucett's house and, with an axe, killed the mother and her child, while they lay abed.

The house was searched for valuables, all of which were secured by the murderers. They then went to the cabin in which were aleeping the three negro women and, having gained entrance, were in the act of killing two of them when the one in the adjoining room awake had succeeded in secretly escaping through the window. While the two women lay in bed, fearful blows with the axe split their heads in twain. The flends were surprised on going into the adjoining room to find its occupant had fled. They at once started in pursuit of her, but she evaded them. It is she who brings the story of the horrible crime.

She was unable to tell who the men were, as they were masked, but says there were only two of them. She watched from a distance and saw them ignite a match and kindle a firs on the floor of both houses. When the flames sprang up they fled. Yesterday the bones of the four murdered persons were picked from among the ashes. They are Mrs. Annie Faucett and her child. Ada Wren and Amma Gorman, the colored women. The one who escaped is named Elia Chavers. The most intense excitement prevals in the county, but no arrests have been made. A strong suspicion overshaldows certain persons, who will be arrested if sufficient evidence can be secured. secured.

WATERTOWN. Feb. 15.—George Bassett, aged seventeen, committed suicide by hanging himself in his father's barn, near Carthage, this county, resterday. The loss of an eye a short time ago cansed him to become morose, and it is supposed that the act was committed during aft of melancholy. His body was frozen stiff when found by his sister.

Kelly. Superintendent of the Norfolk Insane Asylum, and of Georgeoliver, charged with being an accessory to the crime, began before County Judge Duncan at Madison yesterday, was concluded at 3.30 F. M. to-day, Beven eye witnesses to the attack identified the prisoners as the men who had pursued and fired upon Dr. Kelly. Although there was an abundance of evidence that Oliver had done much to instigate the attack upon Dr. Kelly, he was discharged. Soulier and Born were held in the trivial sum of $2.500 to answer. Physicians say that Kelly's chances of recovery are very slim.

LABOUCHERE AND LEWIS.

Testimony About Their Connection with Pigott Causes a Sensation.

LONDON, Feb. 15.-At to-day's session of the Parnell Commission Mr. Soames, solicitor for the Times, was further cross-examined. He offered in evidence a schedule of all the signatures o Mr. Parnell that he possessed. He said that Mr. Parnell's writing varied considerably, and produced a letter in which Mr. Parnell's name was written in six different ways.

Presiding Justice Hannen ordered that the letter be photographed.

Continuing, witness denied that he had heard that Pigott and the League clerk he interviewed in Ireland had a grievance against Mr. Parnell. Pigott, he said, had made a statutory declaration that Solicitor Lewis had offered him £1,000 if he would swear that he had forged the letters said to have been written by Mr. Parnell. The Times paid Pigott only £40 or £50. The witness had Pigott watched and traced him into the company of Mr. Labouchere. He paid Houson, Secretary of the Irish Loyal and Patriotic Union, altogether £3,000.

Upon redirect examination Mr. Soames said that no bargain was made when the letters were first brought to the Times. Their genuineness was to be tested before any payment was made, Mr. Soames said Pigott told him of interviews he had with Solicitor Lewis and Mr. Labouchere. The latter sent Pigott several ten-pound notes. One of these notes was forwarded to Ireland and there redirected to London. Witness produced a copy of the letter which accompanied it. It had never occurred to witness to ask Pigott how he had acquired the letters. Neither had be asked Houston. Pigott showed witness a letter from Solicitor Lewis accusing him (Pigott) of having admitted that he forged the letters, and his reply; whereupon witness required that the statutory declaration be made, in which Pigott detailed all the communications between himself and Solicitor Lewis, including the offer of £1,000 by Mr. Lewis, on behalf of Mr. Labouchere, if he would swear that he had forged the letters. This statement caused a sensation in the court-room.

Continuing, Mr. Soames said that Pigott did not tell him of the correspondence he had with Archbishop Walsh, of Dublin, regarding the letters. He had never heard of this correspondence until he heard it mentioned in the court lasevening. Besides Mr. Inglis, Mr. Soames said. the Times engaged Messrs. Birch and Ellis as experts. He had never promised Pigott six pence, but knew that Pigott had asked Houston for £5,000 on the ground that it would be im-possible for him to live in Dublin after giving evidence for the Times and that he wanted to make some provision for himself. Witness had told him he could not listen to such a suggestion but that he (Pigott) might rest satisfied that the Times would never see him ruined through his honestly testifying to all he knew.

Mr. Soames said that a man calling himself Wilson wrote to him offering to give information. He recognized the writing as that of a man named O'Brien, who was an emissary from Egan to Labouchere. The offer to furnish in-formation was simply a "plant." After that he had O'Brien watched. At Mr. Labouchere's instance O'Brien was sent to Dublin to see Pigott. In Dublin O'Brien assumed the name of Sinclair. The men following O'Brien traced him to Labouchere's and Pigott's houses, and then traced Pigott, Solicitor Lewis and Mr. Parnell to Labouchere's residence. The witness knew O'Brien as a man who was known in America as Robertson. It was "Robertson" who deluded Detective Moser with letters which had since been admitted to be forgeries. Kirby was paid £250 to go to America and procure from Sheridan the original Parnell letter, a fac-simile of which was published in the Times. Mr. Hurt.

burt saw this letter. Mr. Soames was re-examined by Sir R. D. Webster. He said there was no bargain whatever with the Times to purchase letters. If the Parnell letters were forgeries then the writings of others, signed with the names of Egan, Campbell, Davitt and O'Kelly, of Tyrone, must have been forged. The bodies of aix disputed Parnell letters were in the writing of Campbell.

Mr. Willacott, an employee of the Central News, deposed that, in an interview with Mr. Parnell on the appearance of the fac-simile letter n 1887, Mr. Parnell called the letter an impudent forgery.

Mr. Macdonald, manager of the Times, deposed that in October, 1886, he got five Parnell and six Egan letters. He stipulated that their authenticity must be tested before the payment of the price which Houston said he gave for When the other letters-those of O'Kelly and Davitt-were tested, he paid Honston £1,780, the exact sum represented as expended in gaining possession of the letters. Houston declining personal renumeration.

in gaining possession of the letters. Houston declining personal renumeration.

Upon the cross-examination, witness said he never asked how Houston got the letters. He had asked about the difference in the writing in the body of the letters and in the signature, and Houston replied that it was a practice of the leaders of the movement that one wrote the letter, another signed it and a third person addressed the envelope. Witness afterwards ascertained from other sources that this was an actual practice, and that some of the letters were grupposely left undated. Mr. Egan wrote whole letters himself. The bodies of the Parnell letters were all more or less written in a disguised, hand except in one letter dated Kilmain. In The writing in the body of the fac-simile letter is disguised, but the signature of Parnel is not. Witness never heard that the letters were offered to other papers, but had heard that the documents had been offered to Lord Hartington before they were offered to the Times. Houston produced no voucher for sums paid. Six months were occupied in inquiring if the documents were bona fide. Witness was convinced that the letters were gennine, and he thought that before the second reading of the Crimes bill would be a fitting time to show to the country the character of the men making themselves prominent in Irish affairs. The Commission at this point adjourned.
